General Master Workman Parsons spent the greater part of the day in Brooklyn, and a considerable portion of the afternoon in conference with Messrs. Delebanty and Webster of the state bound of mediation and arbitration. Mr. Parsons said tonight, in the course of an interview:

"This strike was one that could not be avoided. We are satisfied with the showing we have made.

"I think that tomorrow will see a paralyzed condition of traffic that will make the people of Brooklyn realize the strike is strong enough to speak for itself. They are running no cars in the suburbs and are making all the show they can in the city."

Mr. Parsons said the strike had the sanction of the Knights of Labor, and that the men would derive the moral and financial support of the organization.

The Brooklyn elevated engineers took up the question of the fri transfer from their present position to the position.

attempted to shoot his wife and family today. Mr. and Mrs. Crosby separated last January. Previous to the separation Crosby had transferred to his wife stock in the Crosby Paper mills and the Marion Strawboard mills, which are both owned by him, that he might better fight the American Strawboard trust. After defeating the trust he demanded the return of his stock, but his wife refused to surrender ft.

He visited his wife's home today while she and her six children were eating dinner and again demanded the stock. She refused and he pointed a roxolver at her and pulled the trigger.
The cartridge failed to explode and he tried the second. Mrs. Crosby ran from the house. Her son attempted to strike his father with a chair and the father attempted to shoot him but the revolver again failed to go off. The son secured two revolvers and pursued his father down the street but was caught and held by a neighbor.

Crosby was arrested and given a preliminary hearing and placed under heavy peace bonds. A board to examine into his sanity will be appointed

Man Who Wanted Excitement Obtained it and Narrow'y Escaped Serious Trouble-Amusing Story of Incident That Occurred When Sioux Were in Arms On Pine Ridge Agency.

By CAPTAIN BRADY, JR., U. S. A.
In December, 1830, the Sloux Indians again broke loose from their reservation at Pine Ridge and all of the availiable men of the pitifully small but gallant United States army were hurriedly rushed northward to give them a smash that would be convincing and lasting. There was the Seventh cavally, Custer's old command, the Sixth and Minth cavality, the First, Second and Seventeenth infantry, the late latmented and gallant Capron's flying battery of artillery, besides others. The campaign was short, sharp, brilliant basted into a semblance of order, and that personification of deviltry, Sitting Buil, given his transportation to the happy hunting grounds.

My regiment, the Eighteemth infantry, was too far away to go, and besides, the Rio Grande frontier, with Senor Garza and his band prowling around loose, could not be left unprotected.

During all these trying times, my telegraph office at Fort Clark was naturally the center of interest, and I had made an arrangement with the chief operator in San Antonio to sead me bulletins of any important news. I all, ways made two copies, posting one on the bulletins of any important news. I all ways made two copies, posting one on the bulletins of any important news. be hurried north. No other regiment could do the work of annihilation so well as the Eighteenth. Oh! no, of course not!

By this time the news had spread and the entire barracks were talking. Just as I was about to tell them it was a fake. I happened to glance towards my office, and holy smoke! there was my captain standing on his tiptoes the was only five feet four), reading that confounded builteth. I hadn't counted on any of the officers reading it. Generally they didn't get up until 8 o'clock, and by that time I would have destroyed the fake report.

The officers' club was in the same building as my office, and the captain had come down early, evidently to get a to read the morning paper? (which came at 4 p. m.), and his eye lighted on my builtetin. I saw him read it carefully, and then, reaching up, he tore it from the board, and as quick as his little legs would carry him he made a bee-line for the commanding officers' quarters. I knew full well how the colonel would regard that builtetin if ne found out it was a fake. I was able to discern a summary court-marrial in my mind's eye, and that would knock my chances of a commission sky-highwards, because a man's military record must be spotless when he appears for examination. What was I to do? Just then I saw the captain go up the colonel's steps and in a moment he was admitted. My corpse was laid out right there and the wake about to begin.

A few moments later the commanding officer's orderly came in, and, looking around a minute, caught sight of me and said.

"Corporal, the commanding officer wants to see you at his quarters at once," and out he went. "Start up the beginning of a parade in which I am to play the leading part." I walked as slovily as I could and not appear lagging, but I arrived at my crematory all too soon. I rapped on the dolf man in tones that made me shiver. The colonel was standing in the middle of his parlor, wrapped in a gaudy dressing gown, and in his hand he held my mangled bulletin. Risht at hat
